

I believe that it is often choices, not chances, that shape our lives. I made a choice to come to Coady to learn more, to contribute more and to dream more with a global spotlight of people around me.

SRIJAN, India

I worked in the 5th scheduled area of our country with the most vulnerable tribes for eight years; demonstrated improved land and water management and agriculture practices which improved the productivity of marginal land of tribals through agriculture and horticulture-based livelihood interventions. This brought a transformation from subsistence cultivation of crops to commercial cultivation of crops with marketing and value chain initiatives.

SRIJAN is a grassroots implementation and support agency committed to promote sustainable and self-reliant models of rural development.

Our pledge is to reduce poverty among one hundred thousand rural poor families by empowering them through a process-driven, member-centric approach; enhancing their annual income by Rs.25,000; and by building replicable and scalable women-led community institutions.
